FOLDABLE GOLF CART

ABSTRACT

A foldable golf cart includes a main support member, and a handle rod pivoted to an upper end of the main support member; the handle rod has a fixing hook pivoted thereto by means of a pivotal element; the main support member has an engaging protrusion; the fixing hook is engaged with the engaging protrusion to secure the handle rod to the main support member after the golf cart is stretched; the fixing hook is disengaged from the engaging protrusion for allowing a user to pivot the handle rod on the main support member to fold the golf cart.